

About Advanced Members and Our Community

HP Hooded Cobra 666

January 31, 2021

Those who are advanced in this place and have built for themselves honor, are expected to handle this in an appropriate way, for the good of themselves and the general community.

Many people have given me crap about for example, cleaning the stables where it had to be with a person with 52 posts over 3 years, who claimed boastfully they cared for Satan. Sorry to say, but being objective, there was no advancement here. No work ethic. Nothing. The rest is emotional history.

You don't care for Satan if you are an HP and you don't do some work for Him on the daily, or at worst, weekly basis. Not even drop by to say a hello or even give some advice to a person that just joined and is completely lost. That's the reality. I have a different view in regards to that. That's the same of wanting the benefits of being an absent dad.

If you're to be this kind of dad that abandons their offspring, and comes around when their kid is like 30 years old and a millionaire, to ask them "Hey, I am your daddy". You truly fucking suck. You don't deserve your kid. It should kick you out. You don't come once in a while, every six months, just to spit at people's faces or have a tantrum and leave. That's disrespect.

In this case, I reserve the right to think that many members, have had far more valor and honor than these examples. And since it's up to me to do talk about this, I only have gratitude for these members.

One may not have time, another may not be able, everyone has issues. The question remains, do you give, so that you can take? That's important here.

Likewise, a bolstered and empowered community is to be enjoyed by the people who stick to it, thick and thin. And there are many, many people like this here. In fact, an overgrowth of said people is in there.

Additionally, many advanced members, whether people understand this or not, your word matters. That's not to say you got to play a plastic character here, but just be mindful of this fact. One person tried to post a complaint about this natural reality, that said in it, "why does the word of some people matter 100 to 1" compared to other people?

Well for the same reason financial advice from Warren Buffet matters 100 to 1 compared to broke joe. Because this is the reality of this. You can't change that.

As one grows within this community, one has responsibility to themselves and to other people. This is not only about the number of posts. Some people may post infrequently but the fact they have been advancing in the path shows. Power brings to some extent, responsibility. That's the natural chain of affairs.

Generally, some people over the years [those who always don't matter or do not do much] tend to whine about the "Community". The Community, my bleeding hearts, who give me this argumentation, is us all. Others are smaller contributors and others are bigger. But it's the general sum of everyone.

The JoS actually has the best "Community" as far as spiritual forums and so on go. There is no place online where people will be helped more than here on these subjects. But since we are all together the JoS, we have to make sure to have our own standard too. In that case, we improve on this also.

Everyone who is a true Satanist, you know, the Gods take special care of people who work for them, educators, those who help, share information, and even have valuable input. It has been many times a single comment or a statement led me personally to an array of a web of extremely important information, that can be returned to the community in a sense.

So one complaining of a poor community, or an under-functioning one, is essentially doing better by doing their part to better that community instead. You want to make it better, then become better. That's the idea about Satanism.

Lastly, there are many people who are holding back from talking even though their word matters. You may not realize it but one comment you make may save someone from damnation. Think for example how many times people have answered to a person asking about suicide. Yes, in our ways, we saved this life. And probably another life reading this and wanting to end itself.

Before Mercury Retrograde hits now and kikes do once again go on the spiritual onslaught [which frequently causes outbursts of problems], but mindful of the above, keep Satan in mind, keep your heads up high, and remember that we are doing a great job. But it can always be better.

The enemy works for disunity, demoralization, fear, and above all, disinformation. That's not to say if one is deceived, they are the enemy. The enemy does this as their lives' mission.

Everything they said about Satanism was nothing but a disinformation campaign to begin with, slander against our Pagan Gods. We found out by PRACTICING it, to be the other case.

Our collective is as good as the sum of our individual characters is. That's what "Community" is. This community will always be as good as the sum of its members. It will be as active as their activity. And will reach as high as we desire it to be, by pulling it up there on our own.

I agree, if you're a person of standing. But HP Cobra, for example, does have the knowledge and skill to deal with these types of things.

If anything goes out of hand, more experienced members also come in and help, in case where destabilization might be a concern, to add the "peer pressure", showing social support etc., that we stand together as a community.

Newbies for example, which has already happened on this thread, do need to ask questions.

Losers and nobodies that come in and ask at times un-sensitive, insulting or disrespectful questions, or outright post just to sow discord, rarely if ever gain any grounds and are easily dealt with by the admins and experienced members. The usual troll, Jew, and infiltrator are a common thing and the majority of the longtime members are wise to this. Or they need to experience it.

It's in the off-shot groups, that are outside these forums, that any type of demoralization usually happens. And that's, from what I assume, Jews and infiltrators. Not Spiritual Satanists.

If you're a Spiritual Satanist with standing, and you're somewhat in a position where if you doubt the Joy of Satan forums, or anything, might cause giant waves of demoralization throughout the lower ranks --- that is the answer right there: they are lower ranks.

The usual "ethos" from the lower levels to the higher ones are generally the same. There is a "Lowest Common Denominator" for all of us. So any questions don't pose any threat to the stabilization of the forums.

The higher echelons might have to craft a more thorough answer, but in general there is rarely if ever any question that poses a threat, if at all.

In times when there is a giant attack with curses, and infiltrators attacking the forums etc., I believe it is better to remind the experienced and longtime members to give their input. That it's important in the general social argument, to show consensus on topics and opinions, and support. As we are all of different characters and personalities, different members respond differently to different inputs here.
