

The Path of the Eagle

Satanists have abilities and spiritual means, and privileges, that most people on the face of this earth will never possess. The same goes for abilities to improve the self, immortalize the soul and extending from this the body, and endless other abilities that one can develop.

One must never allow themselves to stray from this path. Sure, it gets difficult and the enemy or certain circumstances may be obstacles in your path. These can be made to work for your advantage as obstacles that are to be overcome.

I cannot begin to talk on the idiocy of some people, and how much wrong they do to themselves from not advancing spiritually, or not caring about these things. This will come back at you really bad. The same goes for people who follow what the enemy dictates, which is a foolproof way to destroy one's life, one's world, and one's soul.

It has increasingly become a trend now for people to join the fail-train of the enemy, accelerating themselves and the world into destruction. Eternal values are trampled down, and deeply important things are perceived as unimportant. Superficial things are considered so important and everyone only realizes too late that all this superficiality, and that the human life is nothing but a short trip that one has wasted.

People expect to first become 80 years old and deeply senile until they even try to entertain thoughts about their death, or any sort of afterlife, or learning, or improving. And until this point, they make sure to waste every little moment of their life into a perpetual movement into loneliness and nothingness. Chasing nothing.

These people are nothing but little worthless sparks that are consumed by other (and nefarious at that) entities, who waste human life and specialize in hiding human spiritual potential from humans. Billions of people exist with inherent rights and capabilities to infinitely advance, but all they will ever know is a little life devoid of meaning. A soulless life.

People frequently say they follow this path to damnation because others are doing it, or are in fear of being ostracized.

It always makes me laugh how these people complain about the problems of the dung. "Oh, we are suffering!". Imagine living as a fly and seeking only crap all your life, and complaining about the smell. It does not sound quite justifiable of tears to anyone logical, does it?

Well, here you go. These people are afraid. Like worms, they are afraid to be stepped upon, or losing their supply of soil. As such, they become the necessary company for more worms to create together more dung.

They claim they will have serious losses if they consider Satan or the Gods, or another reality, or anything of the sort. Yes, they will lose a lot of things, starting first of all with their worm nature. This is going to be squashed out of them, if they choose to cross the gates.

Their masters tell them: "But you will lose your soul!" As if these worms had any soul in the first place. They feel soulless, they are soulless, and they know it to be the case. How can someone be afraid of losing something one never had?

Even worse is when these idiots take it upon themselves, and say: "Oh, but I have a soul". The question is, does one have anything if they do not even know what it is or even felt it, or not even understand it in the slightest? Or when they have signed a contract of faith with jews so that the said already-foreign-element-to-them, is supposed to be assimilated and destroyed for an unknown jew which they claim to also love, and proclaim to be their "God"?

In retrospect, all these people are afraid of is losing their worm identity, and actually coming to, in the end, own their soul. This is for some of these slaves a terrifying thought. After all, what can a worm understand of having a soul?

Only that humanity is not exactly a worm, but it has been systematically brainwashed into this level.

But for those wiser ones, they will also think matters a bit differently. Indeed, a minority only longs to squash its own self, and emerge as a butterfly instead, rather than die as a crawling nothing. One wants to experience their own humanity.

The only failure in life that should concern people, is that they never tried to touch their own higher existing and more spiritual self. There is no greater and more lasting joy than befriending the Gods, and becoming a greater soul day after day, reaching higher and higher. Eventually, and as a given bonus, your world will also improve, in that the generated wisdom, knowledge, and betterment, will always be your allies in a better life. For you and those involved with you, the world, positivity for everyone involved.

Normal people will keep lying to themselves more and more. That a Jew sits on some cloud, that "they" are filled with love, that "they know God", and all sorts of other bullshit these liars tell themselves until they internally collapse. No wonder most of these people are in a constant state of fear, flip out, or move through life tranquilized by drugs or by increasing ignorance. One has chosen death and not life. And aside from death do come plenty of lies and plenty of ways to die, sure, and our world also has made this very convenient as we are an ignorance-based world.

Eventually, this will change despite of the expectations of the brainless mob and its parasitic masters. So those who have had the fortune to understand the truth and fly into the high mountains, must remember to never give up, never be weak, and never be a fool - it is better to fly as an Eagle, strive, or even fall as an Eagle, than to live a life as a worm, seeking only safety in the soil and dung.

Remember always our Eternal Gods, strive to become like them, and do what you can do best to advance. Names have changed, civilizations have risen and fallen, but their teachings and their followers are forever, and will be forever.

Why will the Gods uphold with Spiritual Satanists forever? That is a simple thing to answer. Because our offer and dedication to them extends on the further ends of allowance to accept Truth, however inconvenient or uncomfortable, or even if it is too good to be True - it's accepted, and the Satanic Soul is open to this.

One turns to the Gods from here to see things that most others cannot even handle to imagine, or even remotely mentally indulge. This, in a world filled with lies, is an important value and statement: one chooses the path of the Eagle and not the path of the worm.

And the Gods are inspired alongside the Eagle, and smile on behalf of the brave.

Fly high always, fellow Brothers and Sisters in Satan!
