

666 and Satanama

In the ancient world, 666 is the number of Godhead. The ancients used 666 under a pentagram, the symbol of the five elements and the serpent God, to show this. They stated this was simple numerology, just the 6 repeating three times on its own.

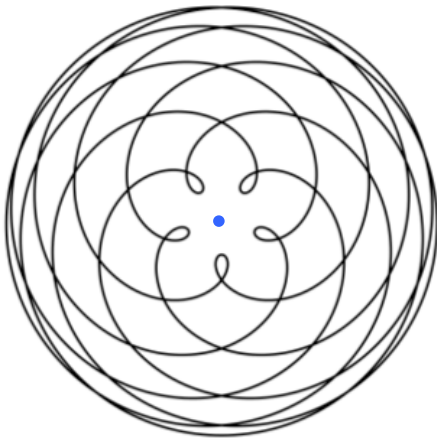

In Sanskrit, SAT is the sixth letter:

०	१	२	३	४
0	1	2	3	4
shuunyá	ekaḥ	dvau	tryaḥ	catvāraḥ
५	६	७	८	९
5	6	7	8	9
pañca	ṣaṭ	sapta	aṣṭa	nava

When fully and properly spelled out in Sanskrit, Sat is Satanama. Six is the number of creation in the ancient world. It is the union of the electric and magnetic elements of male and female, the Yin and Yang, into all creation. SATANAMA is the five elements of creation.

S and N are the male elements and T and M are the female elements. Fire and Air are male and Earth and Water are female. The A is neuter, the Aether, out of which the male and female elements manifest. As physical reality forms, the A is placed with all four other element letters to give them power to generate. This relates to the number six, which is the union of the male and female aspects into one form: that of the universe. Our word "sex" comes from the Latin word for Six, which is Sex, the union of male and female.

666 is expressing the letter 6, which is Satanama. The Pentagram placed with the 6 shows the five elements, which are SATANAMA, and how they relate to the 666. The Pentagram is the symbol of Venus, the serpent God. With Earth at the center, the orbit of Venus forms a Pentagram:

It also rotates to the left. All of these are symbols of the serpent energy.

SATANAMA is the name of God in the original language of Sanskrit.
