

Consciousness

This was a reply to the thread about Democracy. This factor needs to be understood as the solution to the issues at hand. Despite debates on one form of government vs another form of government, it all comes down to just qualification. Consciousness has to be put back into the equation and this has to be the criteria for qualification. In the ancient Pagan aristocracy, the class had a risen Kundalini. Aristocracy means "Rule of the Enlightened", meaning the serpent is risen. The ancient ruling class was always referred to as "The Serpents" which means that they had ascended the Kundalini. The Pagan government held practice elections. The councils were made of the most ascended masters, who would vote the most qualified amongst themselves to be King for a term of service. The Egyptian King's crown is the symbol of why the King of Egypt was also the High Priest of the Serpent Priesthood:

It was consciousness that qualified one for a position within the political class. The ancient symbol of the King's crown, from India with the Meru crown to the western crowns, is the halo of the fully risen serpent. The Egyptians stated that the Serpent Priesthood was still in the image of the Golden Age of humanity. The reason for the class system of the ancient Pagan Priesthood was not one of elitism and snobbish attitudes. It was as the Roman's Pagan aristocracy stated. It ensured the ascended bloodlines, and thus consciousness level, that this evolutionary development was passed on to each new generation. The key here is that an individual in the Pagan society is not discouraged but encouraged to ascend themselves and the entire society was developed around this fact. You could be anyone, and with dedication and practice you could develop the spiritual merits to go to the highest levels. There was a story about a village of fishermen, working-class people, who were all initiated by a Serpent Priest of the Brahmanas into the knowledge of ascension. They followed this and became Brahmanas, reaching the level of the risen serpent.

The point of Pagan society is to advance the entire society to the Magnum Opus.

The People had a constitution of their own within the culture that far outweighs even the American constitution. The People were all bound together by Sanatana Dharma. The society was built on a structure of a super consciousness understanding of the Eternal Spiritual Natural laws of the universe.

The Catholic Empire of the Jews removed all of this and put a mafia into power that would enforce their new slave empire on the Gentiles. This became the new aristocracy that, with the Jews running the Church, so abused the People that they wanted something better.

Today we don't have a Democracy, we have a Jewcracy. The Jews have monopolized all aspects of power. The banks, media, and corporations use this to buy the different political parties and monopolize the government as well.

In the future, the qualification to run for any branch of government must be consciousness and that the candidate has fully ascended the Kundalini energy. That will take care of all the issues once consciousness is back in the equation.
