Astarte is very big in regards to protecting, cultivating, and taking care of the planet, the species in it, and the environment. Aside many crimes the enemy has done, one of the most major crimes, is to demean all other forms of life, and falsely claim that "Humans are the most important form of life" on the planet.

Yes, we humans may be the smartest form of the planet, or the craftiest, but we certainly are not the most physically strong form of life. And we also tend to be the most stupid than all other lifeforms, too. Our stupidity can be costly not to ourselves, but other forms of life on the planet. Nor are humans the most beautiful form of life on the planet that has to survive by itself. There is other worthwhile life on the planet, that is currently seeking to advance itself, and survive side by side with us.

We have violated the rights of many lifeforms, in particular, because we violated the first law of not emulating parasites: we have been emulating the jew and his corrosive mentality, and we have become as a result, harbingers of corrosion. Yet this can definitely be reversed with a change in our morality and decisions.

Meanwhile, "humanity", led by jews, is ruining the earth right now. The jewish moral and ethical dogma that supports that "Humans are superior" to other forms of life, or based on superstitious and unnatural beliefs, has made us hate and forget nature. What is "Paganism" but the rural worship, and the natural worship? Our Gods put as their symbols glorious species of animals, that are wise, beautiful and wonderful creatures of nature.

Nature expresses herself through her creation, and as far as we are concerned, we are another creation of nature. In our case, there has been an effect from the hand of the Gods, but still, everyone came from nature, and to nature we will return. The Ancients, called "Nature", with the name "God". And in nature, "God", or the principle of consciousness, manifests.

From worms to the most beautiful bengal tigers, nature manifests herself. While not all life is of the best kind, or beneficial to humans, life in general remains sacred, and it is a sacred duty of humans to uphold nature, and for us to co-exist with nature as much as we can. There are other species that try to live their existence in the cosmos, not just "us" humans.

The striking majority of these creatures, are not only not dangerous to us in anyway, but they are helpers to our well-being. Fish, vegetables, oxen, what have you, the list is endless. On the parasitic side we have things we could live without, such as fleas, but most of these things do not help nature either in anyway, and their "evolution" would only mean more misery for many other lifeforms. So in that case, if we are able, we have to minimize if we are to care about the world.

Astarte in one experience I had with her months ago, referred to the Earth, as "My beautiful garden" and expressed disdain in regards to how we are faring on the planet. She also mentioned that many of the "leaders" of this world are rather ignorant, self serving, and careless in regards to nature and the environment, but that other councils are doing progress in implementing some policy. Astarte is a strong motivating force in influencing the councils of this world in implementing environmental policies that will help the earth.

This is not about fake ass hype done by eco-warriors who only need your donations. The situation is more serious than this. This is also not about doing corny donations to questionable organizations, or just using bio-degradable straws. It's also not about buying a jewish book that some jew cheaply wrote in regards to raving about "Climate Change" to get votes.

However, every little bit counts in helping the earth. This includes recycling, using re-usable bottles, and generally straying away from habits that destroy the planet. This is an individual dimension, and yes, this helps. One may not be able to do everything perfectly, but if people cared more, a lot of progress would be done.

To name an example here, the other time I went to throw my trash as everyone does, and I saw huge piles of boxes that were cardboard [and therefore could be recycled] thrown in the regular trash can. 10 feet away it was the recycling trash can, where all of this could go. The fat-ass asshole that threw these there, could take just 5 steps, and throw them on the appropriate trash can. They did not. This shows a low quality of human being, and unfortunately, there are many.

Humans tend to act like a cancer to the earth. Breeding without remorse, or caring about birthrates, is another problem. However, according to Astarte, this is not the primary problem, but government behavior on this. Imagine this example, if the world was putting as much effort as they did on Co-Vid, in going full green energy and bio-degradable, wouldn't we have advanced tremendously?

If media constantly bombarded people with ads to do the right thing, or even rewarded people with cash or currency every time they threw their trash correctly, or they cleaned a beach out of it's trash? People would be razing the planet trying to clean it, and not to destroy it.

The jews and the enemy are a great prohibitive factor in this, as much of this revolves around the financial realities that encompass the earth right now. But the Gods are not going to ask, and they will enforce the system as they see fit, despite of what some reptilians think on the matter. After all, according to the enemy, the planet is to be turned in a cyber-tropic wasteland where gas and nuclear debris is all we can smell on the air. The Gods do not have that vision for mankind.

Astarte also mentioned something else in the super brief meetup. In regards to Ancient Civilizations, she told me to "pay attention to how all of them were bio-degradable". The most non eco-friendly skyscrapers that are built today, will be shambles if not maintained in 100 to 300 years. Maybe they will collapse at less than 100. These are garbage creations for a garbage civilization that seeks only the temporary.

Some are so bad, they are literally leaning already, and are about to fall as is, needing constant support over and over again. Yet, we sign and praise our acumen in creating buildings. We aren't smart as a species, and the jewish arrogance that tries to pretend we are so advanced, collapses upon itself in it's inspection.

Meanwhile, the Egyptians, or the Mayans and many others, built megalithic structures, that have lasted 5000+ years, and with materials that will not destroy the earth. Bio-degradable doesn't have to mean weak. On the contrary, with proper development of technology, we can go even further in our development than we do today.

The reason that we followed this trail in our evolution is because the enemy provided botched solutions based on fragmented knowledge. For example, we discovered plastic, but we had no clue on what to do with it. Our planet had to pay the price. Yet, today we discover there were other ways of carrying things, and we think that we are smart, but all the people of the Ancient Civilizations knew about these things. Modern man is not smart, he is rather stupid. Modern man first destroys, and then seeks to "correct". Smart people start off with better and more correct solutions, and if errors show, they are mild.

We think it's modern to carry a wool bag on the supermarket, and that this is too much, but how did people carry everything for years? Bio-degradable materials.

Another major issue that was heaped on the earth, was the persecution of bright minds that could have saved us from a lot of misery. A blatant example here is Tesla. But humanity was collectively enforced to the fate, by the enemy, to consider it more important to maintain the rotten system of hebrew control, than to look after itself. The ramifications of this choice or weakness are coming in. We will have to solve these matters quickly as a result. But there is still hope and time, that is for sure.

Astarte added that most of the materials the people of the past used, are simply bio-degradable. In regards to our technology, everything can also become bio-degradable, but we are simply taking a "different way" and this will take "a lot of time" until we are there and capable of turning out technology in another direction. But it is entirely possible to have the outputs of energy and more, without destroying the Earth.

Yet, the enemy wants to enforce history in such a stalemate, that our planet becomes a wasteland, and we are forced to move planets, or essentially, enforce us to their own "solutions" to the problems that they caused us - for example, to reverse eco-destruction, for us to become borg, or to have to implement some reptilian holocaust to stop humans from massacring the planet, or simply forcing some of our own to some exoplanet. The enemy first digs our collective hole, and then they offer a solution that will not get us out, but keep us stuck there forever.

Some of the reasons NASA and Elon are looking now in Mars, is one of these - because they are aware that our time on earth may be limited if we insist on specific wrong avenues. Humans, while we do better, we aren't showing many signs of stopping, and world leaders do not care as they should.

World leaders would do better right now to listen to sense and start implementing, investing in, and doing what is in their power to reverse this monstrous trend that is manifesting. A question to ask ourselves is, what if all the media, instead of hyping about Co-Vid, started hyping for let's say, people exercising or people going more bio-friendly? Of course, there would be many positive effects.

Where are all these masks that billions are wearing now from Co-Vid going? Oceans, the earth, and so forth. It may take them a thousand years to break down. Why? Because we went into a hype of stupidity. The instructions should be clear, to go for only reusable masks. But whatever, we had to rush this through also, because of the super killer flu.

In regards to Trump, he severely lacks an environmental agenda, while at the same time, the Left has turned the matter into some sort of circus of extremes such as enforcing destructive veganism, that humanity simply cannot live on. Trump is correct on that we are not on red alert, but he is very wrong in that he ignores scientific statements that are showing that if we do not act, we might as well be damned. Maybe we aren't doomed in 20 years but we are in 60, the situation remains a big problem as is. Yet, many people in positions of powers, time things only on their lifespan.

This causes more issues, because we also have lost on another Truth, which is REINCARNATION. Leaving behind a trashed planet, we will have to return to a trashed planet, and there will be no escape from the trash that humanity is creating. The world looks big and impossible to be finished off, but this is a real possibility if we insist on the excessive population we have, and with the same consumerism patterns. And those responsible will return at some point in a world where the shared responsibility of this damnation will be manifest.

Another situation that has arose in the late years and is deadly, is the "China-fication" of all living goods. Now, nothing lasts for any amount of time. Everything tends to never last for a long time, and this was so that people keep on buying things, that are cheaply made. This is because, the system of the world, financially, does not want to redefine itself, so that people have more purchasing power to buy better things [which would be more costly, but would last longer] but they want people to buy shit that has a short lifespan, because most consumers tend to be unable to buy things of lasting value or quality. This is damning when drawn to it's logical extreme. We are living in this extreme today.

People worldwide want to eat meat and nothing can/will stop this. However, for example, we could redefine the way we do farming. But the left and whomever supposedly cares for the earth, goes for "Zealot" solutions that nobody wants to implement, and people hate. The reaction to this is carelessness.

It is crucial our world moves away from the Jewish paradigm of thought that led us to this place fundamentally. It was Jews that conceived the highest sacrilege against nature, which was the idea that the earth was a pointless and meaningless space, that was only some sort of botched creation of their mental phantom, their shitty ass "God". From there onward, people started following this example and started ruining the earth.

Our way of treating the earth wrong, is rooted fundamentally in all the beliefs the Jews have injected in the minds of humans as their moral foundation: The nihilism that comes from the worthless non-spiritual Jewish religions that account to nothing, the belief that "You only live once", the belief that the Earth is a pointless mass going around an even more pointless universe, the belief that the "afterlife is the only thing that matters" and other myriads of self-hating and world-hating beliefs, such as that animals do not matter or other things like that. You hate life based on the enemy programs, and you will of course hate earth and everything in it.

Lastly, as Satanists, one must take their considerations to do their part in helping the earth. The basic thing is that we don't become trashes and cancers to the earth as far as our own person is concerned. Then, we have our family, friends, or town. Depending on one's personal power and responsibility, one may for example want to go into some pro-earth organization, or want to do volunteering work [you can always make friends there, too]. Some of you may end up in politics, so you must keep this in mind as well. Others already are, so make sure to show people a good example.

The message here is to do good when one can. As the aim of Satanism is the Magnum Opus [and therefore immortality] one must think of the earth likewise as a place where one will reside [as our Gods have instructed]. We are not like the enemy slimes that come through this world as reptilian destroyers, we are the reverse. They are damned creatures, but our Gods are about eternity.
