"There is a question in my mind. Father Satan and the God/esses are so strong and intelligent. How could Reptiles stand against them? Was it because they are so many in number? I don't understand. This war should have already been won in both astral and galaxy. I know, what we now should focus on is their pawns aka "shekel masters" but I'm just curious. Hail Satan! To a future with no Reptilians and their sons!"

There are many worlds and different layers of the "universe" or "reality". These creatures inhabit lower levels, but yet way higher than these that we humans live in.

They have a lot of dominion over the lower levels, but not the higher ones. We humans due to spiritual fall, are residents of the lower levels where they can copiously affect us.

The descent of beings on lower levels also inherently limits them and makes them subject to other limitations. If the Gods went "down there", they wouldn't be "up there" and they would be forced to descent.

This has happened before when the Gods were on earth, with considerable risks involved. This can incur attack, failure, or even death, due to laws of the universe.

Likewise, the enemy in understanding of what could happen to them, they don't interfere directly with the levels that the Gods exist. They rather avoid everything. Many battles are on proxy levels, not direct.

The Gods have no particular issue of getting harmed by these creatures nor they can negatively impact them. They are too evolved past this level. Only humans are affected [and possibly other progressing lifeforms] are affected. That's because we aren't yet as a whole advanced way past this. For example, it's not like Thoth can be deceived or affected by these creatures. The Gods are well beyond what can "affect" them from any of this.

For the Gods, the enemy hardly "exists". They cannot be affected at all by that stuff, but they can cause damage to beings the Gods help, or even the higher beings that are trying to advance, or other beings in general. Therefore, they need to be stopped.

For humans, the road is very long, but we aren't unsupported. Eventually, we will overcome the enemy too.

The enemy likewise doesn't "descend" into the levels of coming here physically directly, because they if they did this permanently, the incurring limitations might destroy them.

This is no different than how one can inspect a black hole when astrally projecting, but if you go there physically, you will probably be crushed in the gravitational pulling force.

You can be the strongest and smartest person on earth, but if you go down the jungle with multitudes of thieving tribes, chances are you might be robbed or killed regardless by the beings there. Even if you go with an army of security, the swarm of these levels might still overtake you. Numbers are also related to this, and the enemy is known to be "in the multitudes" too.

Therefore, you send well prepared forces in these jungles that are accustomed to this level or rather native inhabitants, and they wipe out easily what is not of your nature to do, with your guidance, support, knowledge and wisdom. Then they clarify everything and the king can again descend, after this level is sufficiently repaired.

I realize what is said here might be a bit confusing or cryptic but as people advance, they will readily understand all of this. The enemy knows the very same likewise. This is the reason they put humanity on spiritual quarantine, because if humanity properly "ascends", they lose their influence over them.

But so long it stays lower and sinks low, they have control over it. Their hopes are to wipe it out, so that we no longer pose a problem to them, on top of everything else.

It's of vital importance to the enemy that we remain ignorant and spiritually oblivious. Or they will lose the potential of taking over "our world".
